Flash Flood Threat

Florida

- Florida's Atlantic Coast is being pounded by relentless rain, which will fuel a dangerous Level 3 out of 4 flash flood threat into Saturday, after flooding prompted emergency declarations, widespread road closures and high-water rescues Wednesday.
- The Level 3 flash flood risk is in place through Friday for the same areas that were impacted by deadly historic flooding earlier this month, including Brevard and Palm Beach counties.
- Flood Alerts have been issued for the entire Florida Atlantic coast through Friday, including over Jacksonville and Miami, as well as areas inland, such as Orlando.
- Broward County and the cities of Fort Lauderdale and Hollywood declared states of emergency Wednesday as flooding mounted.
- Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis expanded an emergency declaration originally issued for flooding earlier in November to include Broward County following Wednesday's flooding, along with additional counties along the Atlantic Coast ahead of more rain this week.
- Parts of South Florida have tallied more than 14 inches of rain since Tuesday, with widespread pockets of flash flooding reported along the entire Atlantic Coast.
- St. John's River is one of the slowest-draining rivers in the country and is still in major flood stage following that historic flood event.
