WSP USA INSPECTION SERVICES DISASTER AWARENESS REPORT

December 19, 2025

Severe Weather Outlook Northeast U.S.

- The same storm responsible for recent flooding in the Northwest and high winds in the northern Rockies will swing through the Northeastern states to round out the week.
- Due to the storm's strength, combined with a warm air surge, heavy thunderstorms developed in portions of the Mississippi and Ohio valleys Thursday.
- Rain from the storm will fall in multiple bursts of torrential, gusty downpours as it sweeps across the Northeast and parts of the Southeast.
- Heavy rain falling on top of melting snow could lead to urban flooding, especially in areas where snow piles block storm drains.
- Gusty winds associated with the storm can be strong enough to cause downed trees, branches and power outages.
- On the back side of the storm, it will be a race between strong winds drying off roads and sidewalks versus leading to a quick freeze-up.
- From parts of Ohio and West Virginia to western Pennsylvania, upstate New York and north-western New England, rain will mix with or change to accumulating snow Friday.
